RE: Homeowner responsibilities under NM811 law & TMWUA policy

Dear Neighbors,

New Mexico One Call, Inc. dba New Mexico 811 (NM811) requires everyone involved in excavation using mechanical equipment to provide at least two working days' notice to Underground Facility Operators. The NM811 Homeowner Portal provides a way to submit that notice. If you're planning any mechanical excavation on your property go to www.NM811.org, scroll down to click on Homeowners, then I'm About to Dig, and that takes you to the Homeowner Portal where you can request a dig ticket by following the prompts.

When a property owner submits a dig ticket request, NM811 notifies all member utilities with underground facilities at or near the excavation site. This triggers the two-business-day window during which each utility must respond and physically mark the location of its underground infrastructure when indicated.

As required by law, TMWUA is an NM811 member and receives tickets whenever a Tierra Monte property owner initiates the notification process. We are legally obligated to respond within that two-business-day window regardless of whether the proposed excavation directly affects our water system. Failure to meet this deadline can result in fines for the Association.

For a volunteer board, a two-day response window presents a real operational challenge – particularly when a ticket arrives without warning. Until now we have not had a formal policy in place to help us get ahead of that situation.

The policy outlined in the attached document addresses this by requiring property owners to notify the Board early in their project planning process. Earlier notice allows us to prepare our response before NM811 issues a ticket, reducing the urgency and ensuring we meet our legal obligations without scrambling. Please let us know if you have any questions regarding this policy.

Sincerely,

Kate Goldblum
